

Short guide to self-fulfillment

By Silver-Info.com - March 26, 2011

- Don't learn, study or take lessons only to get a job! Better find a job which helps you to learn those things you need to know in order to create your own business.
- Ask yourself what you would really love to do to make a living, what is your dream job?
- Start to answer the following questions:
  - o What are my talents?
  - o How can I use them to make money?
  - o What do I have to learn in order to make real big money with these talents
- Don't ask yourself these questions right here:
  - o Where do I find a safe job?
  - o What do I have to learn to get this job
  - o What do I have to do to keep this job as long as possible?
- Sometimes people start out well and ask themselves where their talents really are but usually they aren't consequent enough when it comes to making their talent work for them. Talents then only play a secondary role for them. Why?
- Almost everybody tried to reach a certain level of self-fulfillment in high school, where you exercised those kind of sports you liked, where you attended those courses you were interested in, where you – in fact – did the things you liked best!
- So how come that so many of us stop asking themselves what they really want to do in life? Instead of following their former dreams, which were often closely connected to the self-fulfillment aspect, they replace them by aspiring to completely different values, such as:
  - o Security
  - o continuity
  - o prestige
- When people grow up they think that it must be a major part of 'being a grown-up' to accept the rat race. The only thing there is left to do for them is to look for their tiny niche which somehow gives them a fairly comfortable feeling, respectively, which allows them to accept their 'situation'.

- But let's be honest. This isn't what we came for. We only came to make the very best of everything! So the message of the day can pretty much be broken down into the following guiding principles:
  - Don't learn for the rat race, learn for yourself, for your own life!
  - Do those things you are really interested and talented in!
  - Don't try to do what everyone around you does – do what YOU want to do!

Nothing but the best this year!
